

Riding for the Brand Run

One of those unwritten rules, passed by mouth to ear from old cowboys to new ranch hands, was that the cowboy should always "Ride for the Brand".

These unwritten rules of conduct were an integral part of the Cowboy Code that brought order to the lawlessness of the Old West. Virtues like taking pride in your work, finishing what you start, and riding for the brand ruled the day. When a cowboy rode for the brand, he was devoted to his ranch and his fellow cowboys and that loyalty was returned in kind.
